Our Facilities

The QEII Cancer Centre located in Halifax, Nova Scotia is the largest cancer centre in the Atlantic Region, providing radiation services to Nova Scotians and specialized treatment for the region. With seven linear accelerators, orthovoltage unit and brachytherapy we provide the latest treatment technology like Stereotactic, SABR and adaptive RT as well as research opportunities.

Cape Breton Cancer Centre stands as one of just two specialized cancer treatment facilities in Nova Scotia, in the beautiful island of Cape Breton, offering advanced radiation therapy services to residents. Scheduled to open in 2026, a new, stand alone, Cape Breton Cancer Centre will feature state-of-the-art equipment, representing a significant upgrade in healthcare infrastructure for the region.

Students interested in completing their clinical placement at the QEII Cancer Centre or Cape Breton Cancer Centre and learning more about sponsorship available should get in touch using the contact information below.
